Tender documents are checked for duplicates, stored, and passed on for review.

A person decides whether the business will bid.

Requirements are pulled from the tender documents, and contradictions between documents are flagged.

Each requirement is matched against answers the team has already approved. Weak matches go to a person.

Strong matches become a draft, checked against word limits, then sent to a reviewer.

Every draft is reviewed. After two rejections, a person writes the answer. Deadlines trigger reminders.

Only the bid owner can give final sign-off. Unauthorized attempts are rejected and logged.
